

Leadership 2030 - building the new leader

Leadership challenges of the future revealed

According to Hay Group's recent Leadership 2030 research, the leaders of the future will need a host of new skills and competencies to succeed. Leaders must start doing things differently. Very differently. Right now.

Through the Leadership 2030 research, Hay Group has identified 6 megatrends we believe will affect organizations and their leaders profoundly over the coming decades. The six 'megatrends' identified suggest that organizations will fail unless leaders drop much of the thinking and behaviour that first propelled them to the top. Megatrends are long-term processes of transformation on a global scale that affect all regions and stakeholders, including governments, businesses and individuals. They transform economies, societies and policies at a very fundamental level.

Join us for a breakfast briefing where we will facilitate a lively discussion on how the nature of leadership will have to change in order to harness the benefits and counter the potentially negative consequences of the megatrends.
